Comfort Dresses.

"Comfort dresses, that is the new name the up-to-date girl calls her tub dresses this year and she plans them in every particular so that they will be a credit to their name," says Grace Margaret Gould in the Woman's Home Companion for July.

"They are smart in style, she wouldn't own them if they were not. They are most simple in design, yet they carry distinction. And they are sure to be becoming, for their colorings are especially charming."

"There is no doubt that extravagance is running riot this season as far as one's afternoon and evening frocks go. But fashion makes up for this recklessness by looking with favor upon many materials which are extremely inexpensive and extremely good looking."

"The fancy cottons, the ginghams, the percales and piques, and the plain and novelty linens were never before seen in such an array of lovely colorings. The blue tints seem to lead and their different shades are many, the old blue and gentian-blue tones being more to the fore than the turquoise and blue-green tints. Then there are the tans and yellows and buffa which vie with one another in their soft, becoming shades. The lavenders are also in favor and very many grays and clever black and white mixtures are seen in these wash fabrics. It is easy to see from this that the comfort dresses are pretty to look at and apt to be becoming to about every woman."

"They have no high stiff collars, but are cut low in the neck in various ways. Some show the Dutch neck, others are a little higher in the neck and finished with a soft turn-down embroidered collar, and then for the girl who does not look well in either of these styles there is the waist with the round neck, finished with some attractive trimming-band."

The Vermont Telephone & Telegraph company is engaged in laying an underground cable from the corner of Main and Elm streets back to a pole on Elm street, so that two poles at the corner can be removed when the new building is constructed. The pole at present located on the extreme corner is now used by the electric light company, having been practically abandoned by the telephone company when the Main street cable was laid. The work of demolishing the wooden building on the Elm street side of the lot is progressing well, the building being practically razed.
